

January 9, 2013 STLE Lunch Seminar

Welcome to STLE Houston Chapter's 2012-2013 Lunch Seminar Series!

Our next lunch seminar event will be held on Wednesday, January 9, 2013, starting at 11 AM at Brady's Landing. Carlos Sanchez, Ph.D. Graduate Student and STLE Research Award Holder, Texas A & M University, College Station will be presenting "Tribological Evaluation under Extreme Conditions". Please reserve the date!

Speaker:

Carlos Sanchez is a Ph.D. student at Texas A&M University. He has a BS and MS from the Texas A&M University. His major interest is in development and tribo-characterization of new and active materials and lubricants

Topic:

Tribological Evaluation under Extreme Conditions. The presentation will discuss approaches and methods of tribological evaluation of coatings and lubricants in extreme environments. The testing of lubricants and coatings at temperatures ranging from -100°C to 1000°C is crucial for the successful development of lubricants for high performance machines and engines. Carbon-based and MoS₂-based solid lubricants are evaluated for these applications.

Location : Brady's Landing Restaurant, 8505 Cypress Street, Houston, Texas 77012
